RECOVER MURDERED WOMAN'S BODY FROM LAKE; BLAME FIEND

Aged Nurse Killed Before Body Was Thrown In Lake

CHICAGO, June 25.—The body of a murdered woman, her mouth strapped with adhesive tape and her head tightly wrapped with cheese-cloth, was recovered from Lake Michigan today.

The woman's purse, which had been strapped to her with the same kind of tape which fastened her mouth, yielded papers which identified her as Mrs. Ida Galbraith, 63 years old, a practical nurse.

An investigation showed that there was no water in the lungs, indicating that drowning was not the cause of death. An abrasion over the right eye, which apparently was caused by a blow, led police to conclude that the woman was slain, perhaps by some demented person, and her body was carefully trussed and tossed into the lake. No motive for the murder could be discovered.

Mrs. Galbraith, it was learned, had gone to a neighborhood motion picture theater last night and had not been heard from since.

ANOTHER LINDY?

According to reports the Lindbergh baby, born at the Morrow estate in Englewood, N. J., and generally conceded to be the world's most famous child, resembles his famous father. Well, here's how his dad looked when he was learning to toddle at the age of four—teen months.

REPORT PRISONERS KILLED IN MUTINY

LONDON, June 25.—Forty-five persons, mostly prisoners, were killed when several hundred convicts in the Rangoon Jail, Burma, mutinied in protest against the terms of the Simon commission's report on India, yesterday.

Military police rushed to the scene when word of the riot was first received prevented a general jail delivery, the dispatches stated. Police and troops fired on the rioting convicts, killing many of them, before order could be restored.

At least four prison guards were among the dead, the messages stated.

PAROLE PRISONER FROM THIS COUNTY

Jess Allen, sentenced from Greene County, is among 132 Ohio Penitentiary convicts who were granted paroles by the Ohio Board of Clemency Wednesday, effective between July 15 and August 15. Allen is included among prisoners who will be released on paroles varying from one to five years. He was involved with two others in the theft of chickens from Harry Heifner, near Gladstone and was convicted of burglary and larceny.

Gold Star Mother Greets Homeland

Mrs. Elizabeth Hutchins, 92, of Oakland, California, the oldest Gold Star Mother to make the trip, on the S. S. President Roosevelt, waving a cheery "hello" on her return to the United States.

DETECTIVE WORK OF WOMAN LEADS PAIR INTO POLICE TOILS

Check Workers Are
Foiled By Cleveland
Women

CLEVELAND, O., June 25.—Two youths, who were captured here—thanks to the shrewd detective work of a Cleveland woman and her sister-in-law—were to be returned to Detroit today to face charges of automobile stealing and passing bad checks.

The youths are Henry Roberts, 21, and Charles Barrett, 23, according to police. They were arrested after they made the mistake of attempting to pull their allegedly fake check-passing scheme on Mrs. Thomas Kelly of East Cleveland.

The pair rented a room from Mrs. Kelly, offering a $60 check as down payment and asking if she could give them the $20 balance "to save them a trip to the bank." Mrs. Kelly consented. Mrs. Patrick Kelly, her sister-in-law, looked at the check later, however, and intuition, or something, told her the check "looked fishy."

The two women checked on the check and found it didn't check, so they started out on a hunt for the pair of youths, believing that they might try the same system elsewhere.

After scouring the neighborhood with the assistance of room for rent ads, the two women finally located the youths, "renting a room" in a house. They instructed the landlady to detain the pair, and while one of them guarded the door the other telephoned police.

BANCORP TO OPEN IN WASHINGTON C. H.

WASHINGTON, C. H., Ohio, June 25.—The First National Bank of Washington C. H., O., will be in operation here in a short time, it was learned Tuesday. It is to have a capital stock of $150,000, par value of the stock to be $50 a share.

The BancOhio Corporation is promoting the enterprise, owning a majority of the capital stock, and back of the new bank will be the huge resources of that institution. The people here are much pleased with the outlook.

For many years this city had five banks. Two years ago, three consolidated and recently two closed their doors. For six weeks there has been only one bank here.

Happy as She Ends Long Solo Flight

Miss Amy Johnson, 19-year-old British aviatrix, beside herself with joy after her landing at Brisbane, Australia, recently, at the end of her long solo flight from England to the Antipodes. The flight required nineteen days, ending on May 24. She is shown with a bouquet presented to her by an admirer.

POPE NOT ILL; DENY REPORTS

VATICAN CITY, June 25.—"Pope Pius XI has not modified any of his daily habits and it is ridiculous to affirm that his eminence is ill," an intimate of the pontiff told International News Service today in response to widespread rumors that anxiety had been expressed over the Pope's health.

ESCAPED PRISONER RETURNED TO JAIL

COLUMBUS, O., June 25.—Guy Tennent, 32, Cuyahoga County robber, today was returned to Ohio Penitentiary from which he escaped November 24, 1929, by the Lucas County sheriff.

Tennent, who escaped over the penitentiary's walls, was admitted to the institution on July 1, 1925, and was serving a 10-to-25 year sentence. Now, he will receive a new sentence.

OHIO PEN ACCEPTS MORE PRISONERS

COLUMBUS, O., June 25.—Two hundred forty-five men have been admitted to Ohio State Penitentiary since the prison fire Easter Monday night, Warden Preston E. Thomas told International News Service here today.

Thirty-four new prisoners were admitted to the institution today. Among these, twenty-one were from Lucas County.

HEAT WAVE CONTINUES BUT PEAK FALLS OFF FROM HIGH OF MONDAY

With mercury in thermometers registering 86 degrees at 11:30 a. m. Wednesday, another day of torrid weather was in prospect for Xenians with little relief in sight. Weather predictions were for fair weather Wednesday and cloudy weather Thursday with not much change in temperature.

SOUTHERN CROSS LANDS IN NEWFOUNDLAND

The Southern Cross, which once flew the Pacific from America to Hawaii and Australia, has landed at Harbor Grace, N. F., after a successful east-west flight under the direction of its noted pilot, Major Charles Kingsford-Smith, who says this will be his last air adventure. Photos show, the famous plane in flight, below; and top, left to right, Capt. J. P. Saul, navigator; Major Kingsford-Smith; Evert Van Dyke, assistant pilot, and John W. Stannage, radio operator, who comprise the intrepid quartet.

DRY AGENTS ARREST SMART PATRONS OF RITZY DINING ROOM

Diners In Panic As Agents Conduct New York Raid

NEW YORK, June 25.—Sidney Solomon, owner of the Central Park Casino, faces a charge of maintaining a nuisance as the result of a raid by a squad of federal dry agents wearing evening clothes on the casino and the dining room of the smart Hotel Ritz-Carlton Tuesday night.

Eight waiters were also arrested, also with several socially prominent patrons. More than 200 persons were thrown into a panic by the appearance of the agents and Solomon phoned police for an emergency squad, saying the agents looked like robbers.

Four agents sitting at a table, arose and signaled from the veranda to sixteen others to aid them. They then arrested diners who are said to have had liquor on their tables. Miss Frances Marion Miller, a grandniece of Mark Hanna, characterized the raid as an "outrage." Princess Obolensky, the former Alice M. Astor, said she had no liquor on her table but was sorry there was none.

The government lost an attempt to padlock a hotel here yesterday when Federal Judge Knox refused a petition to close the Cornish Arms Hotel for violation of the prohibition laws.

STORM HITS OHIO; DAMAGE REPORTED

COLUMBUS, O., June 25.—Much damage was caused in different sections of Ohio yesterday by a severe windstorm, according to a survey by International News Service.

Athens and Springfield reported the heaviest damages. Telephone poles, trees, signs and awnings were blown down in both places. The debris which cluttered the streets of those cities caused a traffic cessation.

The wires of International News Service were seriously retarded in several directions. Telephone communication between Columbus and Circleville and Chillicothe was completely disrupted.

THREE HANGARS, SIXTY PLANES DESTROYED BY FIRE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, June 25.—Loss of more than $2,000,000 was sustained and airplane service out of Chicago was temporarily crippled when an early morning fire destroyed three hangars and sixty airplanes at the municipal airport here today.

Hangars of the Universal and Grey Goose airlines, and one of the two Stout line hangars were burned.

The sixty airplanes included twenty large tri-motored Fokkers, which were valued at $55,000 each.

BORDER PATROL BILL WILL BE VOTED ON THURSDAY IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The administration's border patrol bill, unifying government forces to combat liquor and other smuggling on the Canadian and Mexican borders, will be called up in the house for passage Thursday, Representative Hoch (R) of Kansas, in charge of the bill, said today.

Hoch's announcement followed a conference with treasury officials on objections raised by Representative Clancy (R) of Michigan, who charged the bill opened the way for the biggest peace-time espionage system in history.

An amendment is being drafted which may meet the protests of yacht owners on the Great Lakes and other border residents, Hoch said. Clancy expressed doubt whether it would be satisfactory.

The bill now pending in the house, repeals navigation and tariff laws under which small yachts

It's a Boy at Lindbergh's

The long-awaited heir to Colonel and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh arrived when a baby boy was born at the Morrow estate in Englewood, N. J. A happy angle to the birth is that it was also the birthday of Anne Morrow Lindbergh—her twenty-fourth. Above is an idealistic conception of the world's most famous mother today with her babe, drawn by Dan Smith, a noted artist.

PLANE FORCED DOWN IN NEWFOUNDLAND IN FLIGHT OVER OCEAN

Lands Safely At Harbor Grace Airport After Exhausting Gas Supply In Fog; Will Refuel And Continue Trip To New York.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Major Charles Kingsford-Smith, daring Australian aviator, who today completed a successful east-to-west crossing of the Atlantic, with three companions, in the monoplane Southern Cross, is expected here some time this evening to receive the homage due a hero.

Forced down at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, at 6:53 a. m. Eastern Daylight Saving Time because of gasoline shortage, the Southern Cross was expected to take off for New York, according to word which was received here.

Full preparations have been made both at Roosevelt and Curtiss Field on Long Island to receive the four gallant airmen at the conclusion of their interrupted flight from Port Marnock, Ireland, to New York.

J. N. Kelly, director of flying operations at Roosevelt Field, told International News Service he understood that the veteran monoplane would be refueled as speedily as possible and the flight would be continued.

The flight of the Southern Cross, which covered approximately 2,300 miles, was accomplished in thirty-one hours and twenty-eight minutes. Severe headwinds during a large portion of the flight, coupled with dense fog over the Grand Banks which caused the airmen to "fly blind" for hours without being able to get their bearings, diminished the fuel supply to an unexpected extent.

Major Kingsford-Smith has estimated his plane could remain in the air for thirty-eight hours, and had hoped to reach New York within thirty-four. While he was balking in his intention, the perfect landing which was made at Harbor Grace won for the Australian ace the distinction of the most successful east to west crossing of the Atlantic which has yet been achieved.

The only flight comparable to that of the Southern Cross was that of the German monoplane Bremen, in which Major James Fitzmaurice, of the Irish Free State air force, Baron Guenther Von Huenfeld and Captain Herman Koehl flew from Baldonnel aerodrome, Ireland, to Greenlee Island, Labrador. The German airmen, however, came down hundreds of miles from civilization, and had to be rescued by rescue planes, while Major Kingsford-Smith's superb navigating brought his flight to a successful conclusion at a well-populated, busy airport.

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, June 25.—Major Chas. Kingsford-Smith and his three companions landed their tri-motored monoplane the Southern Cross at the Harbor Grace airport today at 6:53 a. m. eastern daylight time after a gallant flight with impenetrable fog banks on the last part of their non-stop flight across the North Atlantic from Ireland.

The four men were tired out from the strain of many hours of blind flying through the pitch-dark fogbound hours when the plane's radio compass gave them trouble and they were unable to get accurate radio bearings and determine the plane's position.

It was the first time an east-to-west crossing of the Atlantic Ocean to Newfoundland had ever been successfully completed. And the tired crew of the plane, disappointed though they were over their failure to make a nonstop flight through to New York, were happy in their achievement.

The big plane, her three faithful motors beating a crescendo against the bleak rockbound coast of Newfoundland as she came in from the sea, had passed over Cape Race in the early hours of the morning.

John W. Stannage, radio operator of the Southern Cross, had been at the key constantly giving the world a running account of the flight.

As the Southern Cross neared the island, coastal stations and ships did their utmost to give her radio compass bearings so that Kingsford-Smith, flying blind through the fog, could shape a correct course. The radio compass failed to function properly.

Kingsford-Smith said it caused enormous delay. After passing over Newfoundland, the Australian commander of the flight, saw that his fuel was low.

Reluctantly, though they were dead tired, the crew agreed it would be best to turn back and the big plane which has conquered air trails of the Pacific and North Atlantic oceans was headed for Harbor Grace.

Major Kingsford-Smith sent a message ahead on the radio set. The signals were becoming fainter as the batteries grew weak.

He asked that 500 gallons of gas and oil be ready for him at the Harbor Grace airport.

Arriving over Harbor Grace, the Southern Cross circled at reduced speed waiting for the ground mists to clear so that the airport would be visible for a landing. Crowds gathered at the airport early ready to offer the generous, kindly hospitality for which the bleak little isle is noted.

BOSTON, June 25.—Major Chas. Kingsford-Smith landed his trans-Atlantic plane the Southern Cross at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, at 6:53 o'clock (EDT) this morning, according to a radio message received by the coast guard radio station off Gloucester, Mass.

The Gloucester radio station was in direct communication with the Southern Cross, which messaged of its landing at the Harbor Grace field after battling fog all through the night.

With her compass and radio receiving set out of order and "lost" in the dense fog for hours, the commander of the Southern Cross was obliged to find a haven before his gasoline supply became exhausted, according to Radio Operator J. W. Stannage of the plane in talking with the coast-guard station Ten Pound Island, Cape Ann.

"Landed safely" came the final message at 6:53 a. m. But this was not accomplished until an anxious hour had passed. Just before the Southern Cross operator had said: "Anyone. Anyone. Send a machine above the fog to refuel us or direct us to the airfield at Harbor Grace."

"To the land station: Are we south, southwest or north or east of the field?" "Send machine above the clouds to us."

Just previous to this the Southern Cross told of a "very bad fog all night" and "trouble with the compass." "Sorry to have to do this, but delay was enormous."

A cablegram from St. Johns, New Brunswick at 2:15 a. m., told of the Southern Cross passing Cape Race. An hour prior to the receipt of that message the Southern Cross had been making frantic efforts to get in touch with the radio station on the cape in an effort to get her compass bearings.

Apparently Operator Stannage gave it up and began canvassing the air for naval compass stations in United States territory, trying to get out of the "radio pocket." He finally reached the naval radio compass station at Surside on Nantucket Island but immediately "lost" the station.

Meanwhile, steamships were giving a helping hand and the plane apparently after circling about the edge of Newfoundland hit back on their course and headed toward Harbor Grace.

Refueling "ships" on the New England coast were ready to go to the aid of the trans-Atlantic flyer. Harold "Bud" Fisher at Portland Airport at Scarborough, Maine, stood ready with 125 gallons of gasoline. Two other planes were groomed at East Boston Airport.

Just after midnight when all had been going well with the Southern Cross, radiograms indicated the plane would reach Scarborough and receive fuel aloft from the same plane that refueled the famous plane, St. Louis Robin in her epochal circle over St. Louis.

A word picture of what it looked like in the fog banks of early morning above Newfoundland was contained in one of the last messages picked up by government and amateur radio operators along the New England seaboard.

"Very dark," said the operator of the Southern Cross. "Blind flying. Motor ringing with flame. Struggle to keep awake with drone of motors."

The picture of the "flaming motor" was taken by aviation men here to mean that the exhaust flames were visible in the darkness. "Flying blind" was flying without the use of instruments.

SNAKES NOT WORTH
WHILE TO REPLACE
FIRE HOSE IS SAID

NEW YORK, June 25.—Add fire precautions, New York City firemen's regulations: "In case of fire use hose. Do not try to extinguish blaze with non-venomous serpent known as boa constrictor."

Not only does a boa prove a poor conductor of a stream of water, but the boa is likely to become annoyed. And when a boa is annoyed he is very annoyed.

New York fire fighters are likely to have this singularity of the boa, and his first cousin the python, brought home to them if flames invade Henry Bartels' pet shop. Fire Chief Kenyon has discovered, on receipt of a complaint that Bartels keeps a room full of live boas constrictors and pythons over his shop in Fulton Street. Not in cages are they, either, mind you, but crawling around loose, coiling over pipes and such.

Fire Chief Kenyon has been picturing what would happen if there was a fire and firemen broke into this room. The room is filled with smoke. Pythons and boas, baffled and angry, writhe about. A smoke chaser cannot see. He gropes on the floor for his hose line. Instead, he grabs a coil of python. And then—?

Fire Chief Kenyon wondered. He called on the eminent snakeologist, Dr. Dittmars at the Zoo. And this is the reply he got:

"In re snakes in Bartels: There is one great danger re these snakes. That is that firemen attempting to fight a punitive fire in said bird store, should mistake them for hoses. Long and diligent researches have proved that an angry snake is no good at all (as the vernacular has it) compared with an spouting hose.

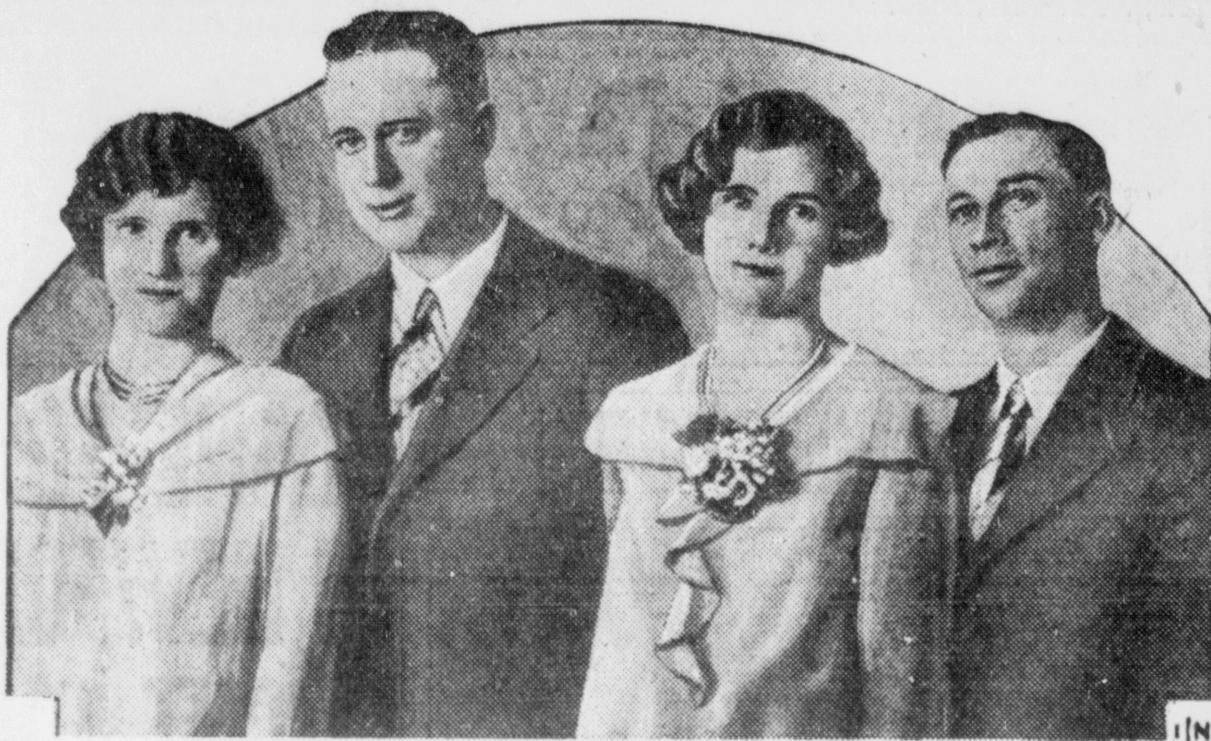

"Should any fireman seize a serpent for a hose, there is great doubt that he would be able to put out a fire as easily with a python as with a three inch hose.

"On the other hand there is little doubt, according to recent experiments, that a snake has more intelligence than a fire hose, although their physical outlines are much the same. There can be small doubt that it would be better to have a snake on watch for a fire than to have a fire hose on watch for snakes.

"Therefore, and considering and concerning all this, it would be well to require Mr. Bartels to give his snakes a daily fire drill at least once each five days,

Wife Swappers to Enjoy or Regret Trade

Poetic Ruling of North Dakota Justice Tosses Unusual Case Out of Court

Mr. & Mrs. Willis Knight and Mr. & Mrs. Lawrence Rikansrud

MINOT, N. D., June 25.—North Dakota may soon be as famous as the wife-swapping State as she has been as the cradle of the Non Partisan League.

Under a recent ruling made by District Judge C. W. Buttz of Devil's Lake, trading your mate with a friend may become the chief indoor sport of North Dakota.

About a year ago Mr. Lawrence Rikansrud and Mr. Willis Knight of Renville County, both farmers, and fathers of large families, decided they were tired of their wives. Or maybe it was Mrs. Rikansrud and Mrs. Knight, who came to the conclusion that being wed to the same men was becoming a bit tiresome.

The Knights had been married for eighteen years and the Rikansruds for twelve. Each couple had two children. The families lived about half a mile apart on farms, twenty-four miles northwest of Minot.

Last June the quartette, who were all on the best of terms with each other, came to the conclusion that a little novelty might be injected into their lives by exchanging partners.

The first step was for each woman to secure a divorce. This was done by having the ladies testify for each other in the suits. A clause in the decrees provided that neither marry again for ninety days.

However, the Knights and the Rikansruds decided not to wait that long. After thirty days they all went to Melita in Manitoba, Canada, and were married in a double ceremony. The new Mrs. Knight and the new Mrs. Rikansrud each retained custody of her own offspring.

All went along swimmingly until the State stepped in, alleging all were not legally re-wed, and brought criminal proceedings against the two brides and two grooms.

Judge Buttz after hearing all the evidence, dismissed the charges, claiming the defendants had not violated any of North Dakota's laws. Asked whether they were not in contempt of court and why the divorce should not be vacated, Judge Buttz declared he had no jurisdiction, not having granted the decrees.

"Nor is it in our province," continued the court, "to ponder whether the facts of this weird escapade disclose personalities rivaling a Casanova, an Indian adventurer of the eighteenth century or of an Aphrodite, the Greek Goddess of love, stalking over the flower-bespangled prairies of the West."

So far all has been serene in the two households. The four children like their new nupers and the entire eight Rikansruds and Knights often get together and talk over old times when Mrs. Knight was Mrs. Rikansrud and vice versa.

NEW BURLINGTON

Mr. and Mrs. William Mendenhall, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Mendenhall and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Compton and John Compton, were entertained Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haynes of Dayton.

They expect to be gone several weeks.

Farm Notes

COMBINATION SUPERIOR TO SINGLE PROTEIN FOR FATTENING STEERS

A mixture of three protein supplements gave more satisfactory results than any one used alone for fattening yearling steers, in a 174-day test recently completed under the direction of Paul Gerlaugh, chief of the Animal Industry Department at the Ohio Experiment Station. Cattle fed cottonseed meal made an average daily gain of 2.21 pounds; those fed linseed meal gained 2.14 pounds daily; while a lot fed whole soybeans made a daily gain of 2.13 pounds. When all three of these proteins were combined and fed to a fourth lot, the daily gain was 2.23 pounds. An average of 1.8 pounds of protein supplement was fed daily to each of the steers which weighed about six hundred and seventy-five pounds at the start of the test. All of the lots were fed ground ear corn, silage, and a legume hay.

The lot fed the mixture of protein supplements had the keenest appetites; while the lot fed the whole soybeans consumed the smallest amount of feed during the last two weeks of the test.

The trial was conducted on the farm of Thomas Johnson, near Columbus, Paul Hackett, manager of the farm, had direct charge of the cattle, which numbered 100 head per lot. More details of the test may be obtained from Paul Gerlaugh of the Experiment Station, at Wooster.

LEGION PICNIC AT KIL KARE EXPECTED TO DRAW BIG CROWD

With inquiries pouring in daily to headquarters of the American Legion and to officers of the Forty and Eight, indications today were that the annual American Legion picnic at Kil Kare Park, Sunday, June 29, would be the greatest gathering of ex-service men and their families since the homecoming held the year following the close of the World War.

More than 500 ex-service men throughout this district with their families and friends are expected to be in attendance at the park on that day. Following is the program:

Assembly at Park—1 p. m.
Concert by O. S. and S. O. Home Band—1:30 p. m. and continuing throughout afternoon.
Junior League Baseball (American Legion sponsored teams) Geo. E. Dignam Post No. 526, of Osborne, vs. Joseph P. Foody Post No. 35—2 p. m.
Field events, soft ball contests between Foody Post and Dignam Post; Middletown Post No. 288 and Geyer's of Xenia with a basket supper will follow. Dancing is to be enjoyed in the park pavilion during the evening hours with Carl Bolan and his orchestra of Springfield furnishing the music.

LOVING CUP IS LOVING SOMEONE ELSE TODAY

There is a vacant spot today in the Gazette office where once stood the handsome silver loving cup symbol of athletic rivalry between the Gazette and the Middletown Journal, an affiliated newspaper.

And there is an aching void in the hearts of Gazette employees, who, taking their cup literally, had learned to love it since it came to this newspaper as the symbol of a victory over the Middletown Journal team in basketball last winter.

The cup was presented to the Middletown paper at a banquet at the Iron Lantern Tuesday night which followed a softball game at Washington Park in which the Middletown team was victorious by a score of 19 to 16. The visitors assumed an early lead with four runs in the first inning, but the Xenia team headed them off in later stanzas and was leading at the end of the seventh, when the contest should have been called because of exhaustion or something. Playing the regulation nine innings proved fatal for the Xenia team, a fast double play killing off all hopes for a rally in the last inning.

Frame pitched for the Gazette while Hansel, Sherry and Jackson took turns on the mound for the visitors and Roy Bunnell did the catching. Ragged fielding accounted for many of the runs, but no one seemed to mind as it was all in fun anyway.

The cup will remain at Middletown until a Xenia team wins it back in some form of athletic endeavor and golf may be the next issue to be decided.

Necker Killer Eludes Metropolitan Police

New York City Sleuths Pose as Petters, but Fail to Trap Fiend Who Has Slain Two and Threatened 14 Other Persons

NEW YORK, June 24.—Two mysterious slayings and written threats to massacre fourteen more victims have terrorized the entire city and sent 1,000 New York detectives dragging the city in the most extensive and frenzied manhunt in years.

All the searchers know of the killer is that he is well educated, a religious fanatic who imagines himself the executioner for an international secret society and seeks his prey from among spooning couples who park their automobiles in lonely sections of Long Island.

His first victim was Joseph Mozyzsky, College Point, L. I., grocer and father of six children, who was shot to death on a deserted road near Whitestone as he sat in his car talking to nineteen-year-old Catherine May, whom the police allege was his sweetheart.

WATER SOFTENING PLANT PURPOSE OF PETITIONS HERE

Petitions have been placed in circulation in Xenia to ascertain the public sentiment on a proposal to install a water softening plant at the municipal waterworks plant, it became known Wednesday.

City officials estimate that such a plant could be installed at a cost of between $70,000 and $80,000 and point out that it would be necessary to increase the cost of water about seven cents a 1,000 gallons in order to finance the project. In that event the minimum charge for water while the softening plant was being paid for would be about $3.20 instead of $2.61, it is predicted.

The Dayton law firm of Turner and Turner has retained the Xenia law firm of Marshall and Marshall to start the petitions in circulation and providing a sufficient number of signatures are obtained the project will be brought to the attention of City Commission.

SISTER OF XENIAN CALLED BY DEATH

Mrs. Clara Thompson, 49, sister of Mrs. Carl Cope, this city, died at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, after an illness of fourteen months.

Mrs. Thompson was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Smith. She is survived by her husband, five children, Mrs. Mabel Mangold and Orville of California; Mrs. Alice E. Kames and Carl of Dayton and Frank at home; one grandchild; two sisters, Mrs. Cope, Xenia and Mrs. Robson of Waynesville and two brothers, Charles Smith and Clarence Smith, Oregon.

According to word received here funeral arrangements have not been arranged.

If You Have Bad Feet

Read What This Grateful English Woman Writes About Radox

"Fifteen years ago I began to suffer with bad feet and corns, and as time went on they got from bad to worse, thus making life a misery. I was recommended to try Radox (after spending a small fortune in one 'cure' or another). I found very great relief in a very short time. I am pleased to say that my corns, also the hard skin from the soles of my feet have disappeared, and walking, which was a torture, is now a pleasure. I can assure you that I recommend Radox to all my friends."

Mrs. L. P. W., Peterborough, England, 23rd September, 1929.

When you put your feet into a footbath containing Radox, the salts soften the hard outer layers of the corn, and the oxygen which Radox liberates enters the pores, opens them and penetrates further and further, carrying the corn-softening salts right into the root of the corn, which is thus loosened so that it can be lifted off bodily.

Get a generous bottle of Radox at Sayre's Drug Store or any drug store in America—a 15 minute bath three or four successive nights will rid you of corns and calouses.

Miss May's story of the astonishing murder was so fantastic that she was held in $50,000 bail as a material witness. However, when a few nights later Noel Sowley, a wealthy radio mechanic, was killed in identical circumstances near the State Insane Asylum in Creedmoor, Police Commissioner Mulrooney accepted both crimes as the work of the same brain-twisted fanatic.

With Sowley when he was slain was Betty Ring, pretty 17-year-old daughter of a city policeman. Miss Ring's tale of the crime and description of the killer tallied with Miss May's.

As soon as he had time, the homicidal lunatic penned and mailed an almost incoherent letter written in code to the New York Evening Journal. This missive announced the second crime and promised a third killing in College Point at ten o'clock the following evening.

It added that a dozen more

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

SIN AND SALVATION—The scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.—Gal. 3:22.

MOTOR VEHICLE PROBLEM

Speaking over the radio recently, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Klein remarked that the menace of traffic accidents is a situation that is black with tragedy. It is shameful in some respects, he said, because it indicates a measure incompetence.

Th constant motor vehicle accidents not merely indicate incompetence on the part of many operators of these machines, but they indicate that the community has made a failure in grappling with a bad situation. Here is a condition of things that people acting together should be able to remedy.

We are supposed to have a democratic government that will protect the rights of the people. And here we permit more than 30,000 lives to be taken each year by automobile accidents, and with somewhere near 1,000,000 people injured, and yet the community can't stop it.

If it was not for the activities of traffic authorities and police, there would probably be twice or three times as many accidents as there are now. But it seems singular that having reduced accidents a half or more by various measures, the community can not see the thing through, and come somewhere near stopping them.

Since most of them result from some form of negligence or inattention, it should be possible to reach such a result if the public really took the thing seriously, and insisted that they must stop.

The main trouble is that so many people have become determined to drive their cars at high rates of speed, that so many of them have such poor judgment. In the case of many vehicles operated for business purposes, the drivers feel that they have to get around their routes within a certain time limit.

When the community really feels that these accidents can no longer be tolerated as they are going on now, then some means will be found at least to make them quite unusual.

GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS

An appropriation of $25,000,000 has been recommended for government buildings throughout the country. The pressure from cities and towns for slices of federal money will be something terrific. Delegations of business boosters will haunt the government offices, pleading for the cause of their respective communities. The officials may need an underground passage giving secret exit from their offices to escape these opportunities.

The government formerly thought it was saving money by not erecting many federal buildings, but now it finds it needs them and it has to pay double construction costs. Some economies do not pay in the end. Private concerns usually prefer to own their own buildings if they can, and the government ought to save money by so doing. But if politics or favoritism is permitted to interfere, then the savings that Uncle Sam thinks he is making will not be in real money.

OUTLET FOR OUR SURPLUS

This country produces more than it can consume, according to President Smith of the National Council of Shipbuilders. He says we must either sell more goods abroad, or our factories must lie idle part of the time. Twenty years ago, raw materials and foodstuffs made up 53 per cent of our exports, but now these products constitute but 36 per cent of the same. We have to depend now on selling manufactured products.

American goods are becoming very popular in foreign lands. It is hard to beat our automobiles for substantial quality and ease of operation, and made in their vast quantities they sell at attractive prices.

As fast as the backward countries develop stable government and modern methods, they should buy a tremendous lot of American goods, if our products are vigorously pushed.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

STILL PLENTY TO DO

The saddest sight is a young man who thinks he has no chance in the world because he has no "pull" or because all the things worth while have been done. He reminds us of the man who petitioned congress to close the patent office in 1840 because it seemed to him obvious that all the great inventions had been made.

Whatever one may think of Senator Borah, in or out of politics, he gave sound advice to graduates over the radio the other night when he said:

"I have no patience, indeed, I have something of contempt, for that class of premature pessimists who constantly assert that the great things have all been achieved, that the age of heroes and heroines has passed, that all we can do is to make ourselves as comfortable as possible in a world of commonplace things, jostled and crowded with mediocrities counting their money."

"There is another side to the picture. There is something to do. And out of this crowd of young men and women preparing for their life's work, there will be those who will take their place along with the great names of history."

WHAT IS A NEWSPAPER?

It is not easy to give a definition of anything. There are so many things that can be said and so many angles from which every subject can be approached. Colonel McCormick, of the Chicago Tribune, has been telling what a newspaper is. His description has been cut on the wall of the Tribune tower. It reads:

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which constitution has ever been able to provide."

BOYS' CLUBS

One of the best things the Y. M. C. A. has ever done is to form boys' clubs. All boys—good or bad—have, at a certain age, the gang spirit. It is not right to try and kill the spirit or to discourage it. The thing is to organize it and turn it to good purposes. It is happily discovered in Chicago that boys' clubs in "bad" districts have decreased the amount of juvenile crime in those neighborhoods. The normal boy doesn't want to "go bad." He wants activity. He likes organization. He likes to go into things with other boys. Not to discourage gangs, but to guide gangs is the better way.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

What are the plans for handling Germany's war debt?

The treaty of Versailles did not fix any definite sum that Germany must pay the Allies, but did charge Germany with payment of its reparation claims. The reparation commission later fixed the amount of these claims at 132,000,000,000 gold marks, or about $31,400,000,000, which was not changed under the Young plan. Under the Daves plan, Germany was to pay to the Allies, after four years, a standard annuity of 2,500,000,000 gold marks, or approximately $595,000,000, subject to an increase by a so-called index of prosperity. The Daves plan did not stipulate any period of time for these annuities to run, but they were intended to continue until confidence was restored, leading eventually to a final and comprehensive agreement. The Young plan, which presumably settles the reparation question, provides that Germany shall pay to its creditors an average annuity over a period of 37 years of 1,998,800,000 reichsmarks, or about $473,000,000, and varying annuities over a period of 22 additional years.

Black Cats

Why is the black cat considered bad luck? According to an old legend, Satan's favorite form of disguise was a black cat, and this probably gave rise to the superstition.

Learning to Talk

How fast does the average child learn to talk? Authorities on children say that the child begins to use single words at from 10 months to a year old. At 23 months he should be using simple phrases. By the time he is three he has a large vocabulary (500 to 1,500) words, and can converse well enough for his own practical purposes.

Illiteracy

Which state has the greatest percentage of illiteracy? Which group of states? Louisiana has the greatest percentage of illiterates according to the census of 1920, and the east, south, central group of states—Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi—topped the list of groups.

Age of Buildings

How long is the life of the average building in the United States? Buildings of every type wear out. The largest part of buildings in the U. S. fall into the group of construction which shows an average life of not more than 60 years, according to the Copper and Brass Research association, which points out that this group represents a present worth of approximately $142,000,000,000.

DUSKY GENIUS

NEW YORK CITY, New York — Harpers have just released one of the most fascinating books of the year, "Paul Robeson, Negro." It's the life story of the dusky genius of the theatre and the concert stage, and is written by his wife, Eslanda Goode Robeson, herself a remarkable young woman who, in no measure, is responsible for her husband's success.

Scribblers about life in New York devote much space to existence as manifested by the Negro, in Harlem. But the stories have no variety. They feature always one thing—the tinsel and tawdry trappings incidental to the elemental night life of the cabaret belt.

The Ebony and Ivory Precincts of Manhattan have another side. There is the Harlem of the intellectual Negro—a far different place from the realm ruled by jazz. And it is this section of the Negro quarter that Mrs. Robeson has selected as the vivid background of her narrative.

When he was graduated from Rutgers eleven years ago, Robeson had his Phi Beta Kappa key, had been selected by Walter Camp for his annual All-American football team. He was a "Four Letter" man and delivered the commencement oration.

From Rutgers he turned to New York's black-belt where he married a Harlem girl, Columbia Law School knew him as one of its most brilliant students. Later, with the Provincetown Players, he achieved distinction in "All God's Chillun" and "The Emperor Jones." Then he invaded the concert stage where his marvelous voice took the music world by storm. Today, he is the sensation of London. In the role of "Othello" he so moves the quiet English out of their accustomed repression that his audiences shout and cheer and weep, recalling him time after time before the curtain, lingering long after the play is over, and going again and again to hear.

Read "Paul Robeson, Negro." It's truly an inspiring book. Remember that the man is a Negro. Think what he's accomplished, and if you entertain a prejudice it may be that the narrative will endow you with additional soul-space. After all the best measure of our respect for God is our treatment of men, black and white. For, as we have done it unto the least of these...

INAUGURATING THE POLITICAL PICNIC SEASON

OLD STYLE FREE TRADE DEMOCRATS NOW SCARCE ENOUGH TO BE RARITY

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Senator Carter Glass of Virginia resented it hotly recently when Senator James Watson of Indiana, G. O. P. leader in the upper house of congress, took it for granted that the whole Democratic party of the present day and generation believes in a protective tariff.

In reply the Virginian questioned whether there were, right then, six Democratic protectionists in the senate. The fact is, at that very time the votes of Democratic Senators Bratton, Broussard, Copeland, Kendrick, Pittman, Randall and Trammell already were on record in favor of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, the highest in the world's history, and an eighth, Senator Fletcher, was listed as "paired" on the same side.

However, this doubtless was simply a slip in Senator Glass' arithmetic; he ought to have said "nine" instead of "six."

But even so, I would have thought Senator Watson was nearly right—that genuine, old-fashioned free trade or tariff-reviving Democrats (a tariff being merely a mighty bad way of raising revenue but not necessarily inconsistent with free trade principles) are at least scarce enough to class as curiosities.

Furthermore, it seemed to me that Senator Glass himself (when I asked him about it) vindicated the Hoosier lawmaker, to all intents and purposes.

"Oh," said the Virginia statesman, impatiently, "if you mean free trade in its literal sense; no, I don't know of any Democratic free traders of that sort."

"That is, none in responsible positions; Henry George believed in it."

"So does Representative George Huddleston of Alabama, and I know of one other Democratic congressman who does but is afraid to say so out loud lest it be interpreted as a violent form of communism."

"We must have some means," added Senator Glass, "of equalizing other countries' lower production costs with ours."

As previously suggested, the senator spoke impatiently. It did not seem discreet to ask him to amplify much further; he fulminates very easily. As a safer source of information I sought out Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, who also considers the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill perfectly awful.

Nevertheless, Senator Barkley agreed with Senator Glass that he adulterated free trade would be too much for a good thing.

"This country," he said, "is fortunate in that it is immensely rich in resources, with a comparatively small number of people to divide these riches up among, which allows each of them a much larger share than is possible in other countries—in other words, a far better living."

Kentuckian, "that Americans ever are going to be willing to give up any part of this advantage to peoples who are not so lucky."

"For a few of our own number to become greedy and try to gouge the rest of us, by demanding a monopoly in overhauling matters."

"But as for permitting the folk of the old world to underbid us in our own markets, which would put us on their standard of living—although doubtless it would raise their standard somewhat, as it lowered ours, no; we must equalize the difference—and an adequate import tax on their products appears to be the only way of doing it."

Without disputing this reasoning's soundness, if it is anything but protective tariff logic, it will strain any economist's imagination to describe what else it is. Yet it makes Senator Glass angry to call him a protectionist.

In reality, too, of course there is ground for disputing it.

It works well as a means of keeping out imports, but positively is a serious handicap to export development—on which the United States every year becomes more dependent.

To borrow an illustration from former Commissioner David J. Lewis, of the U. S. tariff board—

If the protective tariff system, in the long run, were to a single country's advantage in its international relationships, it would be to America's advantage in its relations with the world. But it is fairly well recognized that America's prosperity, both in general and as to each individual state, is due largely to the republic's vast extent as an unobstructed free trade area.

Nevertheless, as the ex-commissioner told me early in the last year and a half's tariff fight, "Only the federal constitution prevented the various states from initiating a trade embargo system against one another early in the nation's history."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Chocolate Mocha Cake—Three-fourths cup grated chocolate, one-half cup strong coffee, one-half cup brown sugar. Cook these three ingredients until the chocolate is melted and a thick syrup is formed. While it is cooling cream together one-half cup of shortening with one cup of brown sugar. Now add the coffee, chocolate and sugar mixture and two beaten egg yolks. Beat well and sift in one and three-fourths cups of cake flour which has been previously sifted with one teaspoon of soda and one teaspoon of baking powder. Mix well and add the vanilla. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Bake the cake in three layers in a moderate oven. The following icing will prove very satisfactory: Caramel Icing—Three cups brown sugar, one-half cup of cream, one-fourth cup of water, one tablespoon of butter, one teaspoon vanilla. Boil all the ingredients except the vanilla. Four minutes after the boiling begins add the flavoring, remove from the fire and beat until the mixture begins to thicken, then spread upon the cake at once. Score the cake for cutting while the icing is still warm.

USE YOUR FAVORITE BERRIES

OPEN BERRY PIE (Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)—Make a rich pie crust by putting one-third cup shortening and one-third cup butter into two cups flour and one-half teaspoon salt. Add enough ice water to make a stiff pastry. Chill for an hour, or over night, in ice chest. Divide the dough in two parts and roll out on a slightly floured board to one-eighth inch thickness. Fit in the pie pan and pinch pastry with the fingers to make a fancy edge and prick bottom and sides with a fork. Bake in a very hot oven (425 degrees F.) 10 minutes until a delicate brown. Just before serving fill the pie shell with whole berries to which has been added a little confectioner's sugar to sweeten. Cover the top with whipped cream flavored and sweetened. Garnish with a few whole berries.

Cook Vegetables in Little Water

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"DEAR DOCTOR: 1. Does the use of baking powder and soda combined with sour or buttermilk in baking injure the digestion?"

Ans. No.
2. "When boiling vegetables such as navy beans and greens, does draining off the water (after boiling a few minutes) help them, or does this destroy the vitamins? I was taught that all vegetables should be drained before seasoning."

Ans. With few exceptions, all vegetables should be cooked in just sufficient water to keep them from sticking to the pot. There should not be enough water after cooking, to drain off. Some of the mineral salts are dissolved in the water and are lost if the water is thrown away. Vegetables should not be cooked to the mushy stage, not only on account of destroying the vitamins, but because mushy foods give no exercise to the teeth and jaws, and prolonged boiling, especially if uncovered, does destroy the vitamins. Baking soda, put in vegetable while cooking, to keep the color, does destroy the vitamins, so this should not be done.

It has long been a custom to parboil dry beans, but I don't believe even that is necessary. Spinach may be parboiled for a few moments and the water thrown out, just to rid of the slight amount of oxalic acid it contains, but even this is necessary only if some of the members of the family are suffering from acidosis and have to omit all of the acid forming foods for a while. (In general, the acid-ash foods are all flesh foods, eggs, cereals—and so breads and pastries—prunes, plums and cranberries, rhubarb, sorrel and spinach; the alkaline-ash foods are all fruits and vegetables (except those mentioned), milk and nuts.)

We have an article on Balanced Diet which may interest you. See column rules for obtaining it.

Dear Doctor: Please tell me why it is that my husband and I, both blonde, one with green eyes and the other with blue, fair skin and our little girl of two years has brown eyes, black hair and dark skin? I have been a good girl all ways, but my husband's folks think she isn't his daughter. (My husband believes me and loves us dearly, but it is so hard.) And we both short and she is a tall ball. Please help me, Doctor? MRS. T.

Your husband's people are very unkind, and they are ignorant of the laws of inheritance. Mrs. T. They should know that children inherit their characteristics not from their parents, but from the grandparents and great-grandparents. If you would look up your family trees, both your husband and your own side, you would undoubtedly find that there is a descendant, somewhere along the line, as your little girl has inherited from this ancestor.

Show them my answer and let them verify it by going to a public library and looking up Mendel's laws of inheritance.

Mrs. K.: Our pamphlet on the Hygiene of Women answers your questions. See column rules for obtaining it.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column in their turn. Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus the following small charge to help cover cost of printing and handling: for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet, ten cents in coin. The pamphlets are Reducible and Gaining, Hygiene of Women, Kidney and Bladder Disorders. Address Dr. Peters, in care of the paper. Write legibly, and not over 200 words.

Endure Heartache Now

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

THERE is just one thing to do when either party to an engagement begins to show indifference toward the other before time for the wedding. And that is, to break the engagement.

You can't afford to run the risk of rekindling the flames of love after the wedding bells have ceased to peal. Better heartaches beforehand for the one who remains true than later to find themselves wedded to an indifferent mate.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been keeping company with a boy for over a year, and about six months ago we became engaged. I see him every night, and each night he tells me he loves me. But about two months ago I found that he had written to a girl that he used to go with. God only knows how that hurt me. I still love him, but I'm afraid I show it too plainly. Before this happened he had gradually become very indifferent, and I was puzzled. He took me to the home of his folks one week-end and introduced me as his future wife. Words cannot tell how happy I was to think that even though he seemed so indifferent he still cared."

"When I came home it wasn't long before I accidentally found out about the other girl, and that he had intended to go to see her but evidently changed his mind. Of course I told him that I understood his indifference and asked him whatever made him do such a thing. He said he didn't know himself. This was almost the cause of a break-up between us."

"Nevertheless, he has never changed his indifference, and I am still wondering about him. I wonder if he loves me or is just pretending and can't make up his mind to tell me he doesn't care to fear he'll hurt my feelings."

"Please tell me, Miss Lee, what to do. Shall I continue to go with him, or give him up and go out and try to forget him. For I am young and have many friends? I would be very hard to say. 'We'll through,' for I could NEVER let go him."

"ANN MARIE: Yes, it would be hard to give him up. Ann Marie, but it would be harder still to marry him and then find out he did not care for you and wanted someone else, wouldn't it? Try to steel yourself to ask him to tell you the truth. Tell him you are big enough to know whether he loves you or not. If he is not sure about it himself, tell him that you will not see him for a period, say a week, two weeks, or more. I think you have been seeing too much of another anyway. At the end of that time, if you find that he really cares a lot and wants to keep on going with you, and if he finds his love will not stand the test of absence, then go out with others and try to forget him."

CYNTHIA: The only thing to do is to write your fiancé and ask him if anything is the matter. You can't plan for your wedding or anything if you don't know where you stand. And you surely have the very best right to know if his love has cooled."

A FRIEND: If you quarreled with the boy friend and said things you shouldn't, write and tell him you're sorry. Then, if he fails to return, you can do nothing more. Six years' difference in ages when you are so young is a good deal."

Cream Prevents Sun Burns

By GLADYS GLAD

Skin specialists have been working overtime during the winter months to remove the evidences of the deep sunburns which were in vogue last summer.

In a great many instances the effects of that orgy of sun bathing still remain. Many women are still trying to rid themselves of the wrinkles in their faces, as well as the discoloration of face, arms, neck, back and even legs. In innumerable instances, women discovered that the sunlight brought the growth of hair on arms, legs, faces and backs of necks to an alarming thickness and length.

I suppose it is because of the devastating results of last year's sunbathing that the subject is being so widely debated at present. Word comes from Paris that the baby white and pink complexion is to take the lead in facial styles, while the Southampton crowd in this country spent most of the winter putting more tan over their last year's coloring.

Older women are the ones for whom over-exposure to the sun's rays may prove most disastrous. Deep sunburns tend to coarsen the skin, dry it, and bring wrinkles that wouldn't have appeared for years. They are not very easily removed, as anyone who has had them can testify.

Yet sunbathing is so healthy and so revivifying, that its surface harm, in the average case, is entirely offset by the excellent benefits to the entire system. Women who contemplate taking sun baths, or wish to acquire deep tans, should never neglect to lubricate their skins thoroughly with pure olive oil or cold cream before exposing themselves to the sun's rays. This will, to a great extent, combat the drying tendencies of the sun's rays, and keep the skin soft and smooth. Also, make the time of your exposure very short to begin with, and then gradually increase the length of the time of exposure.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

The National Softball League race is rapidly developing into a mad scramble and one guess is as good as another as to which of the competing teams will walk off with the title.

At the present writing Geysers and the Lang Chevrolet Co. are tied for the league leadership, each with four victories and two defeats, but the race is so tight that only two full games separate first and last places.

At the start of the season Geysers and Langs dominated the league but lately the Downtown Country Club and Carroll-Blinder Co. have been taking a brace and the two leaders have been having their troubles.

While not given more than an outside chance of winning the league championship, Graham Bantz and the Criterion will trip up the other four teams every once in a while and from present indications no team stands out head and shoulders above the rest.

Dave Barry, the now famous referee who officiated at the last title meeting of Tunney and Dempsey in 1927, and who is still recalled today by fight fans who solemnly count out fourteen when ever he acts as third man in the ring, aired his views recently on the present heavyweight situation.

In Barry's opinion, now that Max Schmelling is in the heavyweight saddle, this fact may induce Gene Tunney to withdraw from his social shell and return to the squared ring. He thinks it certain that Jack Dempsey, the old mauler, will come out of his retirement as pressure of public demand is brought to bear on him.

The idea is that both Tunney and Dempsey may find it more difficult to keep out of the game than getting back in now that the world's championship has passed from American into German hands.

Barry digs into past history and concludes that Dempsey and Tunney are in a position similar to that of Jim Jeffries. Public pressure forced Jeffries to attempt a comeback because the country clamored for a white hope to beat Jack Johnson.

The same situation now exists unless Jack Sharkey is given a return bout and succeeds in wresting the title from Herr Maxie's possession as practically all fans believe he can providing he can rise above his low blow complex.

In the event Sharkey should fail to restore America's native prestige, the cry will be for Tunney or Dempsey to rally to the colors against the German titleholder.

Barry predicts that the first public outcry would be for Dempsey's return with Tunney as second choice.

FRANK JAY GOULD COMING HOME AFTER 17 YEARS

FRANK J. GOULD

EXTERIOR AND INTERIOR VIEWS OF ROULETTE PALACE AT NICE, FR.

MRS. FRANK J. GOULD

PARIS, June 25.—Frank Jay Gould, richest American expatriate and undisputed king of the gambling world, is going to visit the United States for the first time in seventeen years.

Having dwarfed Monte Carlo with his magnificent new $5,000,000 roulette palace at Nice, Gould for the first time since 1913 has been seized with a desire to see his native country. He will sail some time during June or July.

"I want to see for myself what have prohibition has wrought," he told newspaper men. "All I know of my country since 1913 I have learned from others or the newspapers."

The eccentric American millionaire came here for a vacation during the year preceding the outbreak of the World War. Unable to get back and expecting, like other Yankees, that the conflict would last no longer than six weeks, Gould stayed on to help Ambassador Herrick. For one reason or another he has remained here since.

Like his father, the famous Jay

Gould, Frank had been one of America's great railway magnates, in France after the close of the war, Gould, with all the fanfare that has attended all his great financial moves, embarked in business and sport here.

First of all he went into horse-racing on a large scale. When he tired of winning some of the banner races of the French turf he turned to chocolate manufacturing, real estate and hotel ownership.

Gould seems to have the golden touch. Backed by enormous capital and directed by a brilliant financial mind, all his ventures have been blessed with astonishing and immediate success.

Juan-les-plais was nothing but a bunch of scrubby pines on a sand dune when Gould first thought of building there. Today it rivals Deauville and Venice as a rendezvous for the European smart set.

For several years after that Gould's matrimonial misadventures with his second wife, the beautiful Edith Kelly, pushed his business and sport activities off the front pages of newspapers. The long fight among the many claimants for the Jay Gould millions also kept him temporarily in the shade.

But the will fight settled and the involved dispute with Miss Kelly ended by divorce, Frank Gould again proceeded on his sensational career as a gambling empire builder.

His plans for the Nice Casino took away the breath of Europe's richest gamblers, accustomed as they were to ornate settings for their plunging play. Gould sunk $3,500,000 into the erection of the main palace, built almost completely of marble and steel. Besides gambling rooms, it contains a theater, a dance hall, a restaurant accommodating 2,000, and Turkish baths, all designed on a scale that will delight the heart of a lover of architectural elegance.

The project was greeted with immediate success. Frank's wife, the former Florence La Caze, amazed onlookers by winning millions of francs at baccarat from the great Greek gambling syndicate.

Unsatisfied with stripping Monte Carlo of most of its glory, Gould next bought up the entire ancient town of Granville. This he plans to make into a resort rival of nearby Deauville.

On his forthcoming visit, Gould plans to visit Hollywood and San Francisco, although he intends to spend most of his time along the East coast.

BROOKHART SPEAKS TUESDAY NIGHT AT CHAUTAUQUA HERE

A lecture by United States Senator Smith W. Brookhart, one of the outstanding figures in the senate, who is known as a progressive Republican and a member of the celebrated "farm bloc," featured the second offering on the Chautauqua program Tuesday night.

Senator Brookhart is a veteran of three wars and a champion marksman and with him it is not so much a question of viewpoint as of viewpoint.

In the afternoon Tuesday the Artist Entertainers furnished the program. This group included Hugo Brandt, pianist and composer of note who received his training under the best European masters; Paul Clark, who has an established reputation as an American violinist, and Miss La Vonne Field, a unique, vivacious entertainer, who possessed a beautiful soprano voice and is considered one of the most artistic actresses on the American platform.

One of the features of the Artists' program was the ensemble work of Miss Field and Messrs. Brandt and Clark, who also gave a prelude to Senator Brookhart's speech in the evening.

The great comedy drama entitled "The Mollusc" will be presented on the Chautauqua program Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

LESSON FOURTEEN

Stand on the edge of the board with your back to the water, take a spring, after you have balanced your body, touch your toes and straighten out.

Most beginners dread this dive because of the danger of hitting the board. The only way to conquer this fear is to throw your body a little to the right so that there is no chance of hitting the board. You will gradually learn to come back to the board.

This dive when properly executed is a very beautiful dive to the observer and requires endless practice.

Next and Last: The Swan Dive.

OSBORN SHOWS POPULATION INCREASE IN CENSUS REPORT

Additional figures on the 1920 population of three more villages and two townships in Greene County, as shown by a preliminary count of the returns of the fifteenth census, were released Wednesday by Wilbur H. Story, Springfield, district census supervisor.

Osborn village showed the greatest increase in the last ten years, its 1920 population being 1,271 as compared with 1,059 in 1920, a gain of 212. Two other villages showed losses in the last ten years. Cedarville's population is placed at 940, a reduction of eighty-eight as the 1920 figure was 1,028. Population of Clifton is only 190 as compared with 214 in 1920, a loss of twenty-four residents.

Sugar Creek and Miami Twp. showed increases, however. Population of Sugar Creek Twp. rose from 1,193 in 1920 to 1,376 as of last April 1, an increase of 183, while Miami Twp.'s population is listed at 2,388, a gain of 136 since 1920 when the figure was 2,252.

There were 166 farms enumerated in Miami Twp., 154 farms in Sugar Creek Twp., three farms in Cedarville village, two in Clifton and none in Osborn.

Figures on unemployment in these villages and townships were also announced by the census supervisor. Clifton had no unemployed. At the time the canvass was made thirty-two persons were looking for work in Cedarville, fifteen in Osborn, four in Sugar Creek Twp. and thirty-one in Miami Twp.

GEYERS AND CRITERION STAGE REAL GAME AS GEYERS WIN 3-1

In these days of lively balls when managers pin crepe on the sleeves of their pitchers before condemning them to the mound, it is refreshing to see a low score game once every so often, particularly in softball.

In consequence Geysers and the Criterion softball teams out on a National League exhibition Tuesday night at Cox Athletic Field that was one for the books.

Geysers were victorious but the final margin of victory was by a record low score of 3 to 1 in contrast to the 31 to 1 triumph achieved by this team over the Criterion earlier in the season.

Although hit safely eleven times, Herman Wells, Criterion hurler, pitched a game that approximated the best of the season against his hard-hitting opponents. Two of the Geysers runs were unearned and the lone Criterion tally was due to a momentary spell of wildness on the part of Boxwell, Geysers pitcher, who walked a batter with the bases full and forced in a run. Otherwise the contest might have been decided by the smallest possible score of 1 to 0.

After three scoreless innings for both teams, the first Geysers tally was produced in the fourth when one down Brennan dropped Shuey's fly. Then came successive singles by D. Murrell, Boxwell and Bottriff but a double play saved the situation after one run was in.

In the sixth Geysers added another run when Brennan misjudged another long fly by Shuey, who circled the bases. N. Murrell's single and a double by Yeakley accounted for the third and last Geysers run in the eighth.

Boxwell pitched shutout ball for Geysers for the first seven innings but he got into trouble in the eighth. Finlay fanned for a starter but McFadden and Smith each singled. Stiles struck out but Hagler drew a base on balls, clogging the bases. Boxwell then lost control and passed Burk, forcing McFadden over the plate. Herr raised a lazy fly to center for the third out.

The contest was marked by four double plays, an unusual occurrence. The Criterion made three of the double killings and Geysers one.

Of the eleven hits made by Geysers, N. Murrell, D. Murrell and Boxwell each made two. The Criterion gathered eight bingles, of which Smith, first baseman, gathered three.

WHERE 2000 DIVORCES ARE ILLEGAL

Did you get your divorce at Cuernavaca, Mexico? Better start checking up on it if you did. The Mexican supreme court has ruled that divorces granted in Cuernavaca, under the law passed by Ambrosio Puente, provisional governor, in 1921, are illegal, holding the law unconstitutional, thereby affecting more than 2,000 Americans. Photos show the "divorce mill," top; Judge Manuel Caripo, below, who severed many American marital ties, and a view from his bench showing the Cuernavaca Cathedral just across the street, to which many of the divorced couples hastened to wed someone else.

Just Before the Knot Was Tied

United States Senator David Baird, Jr., photographed with his bride, the former Mrs. Frances H. Smith, just before the nuptial knot was tied in Camden, N. J. The newlyweds vanished immediately after the surprise ceremony. They are expected to sail for Europe in July as the Senator has obtained passport. (International Newsreel.)

Cares of Office Worry Big Bill

This is the latest picture of Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson of Chicago, as he appeared at the city council meeting called to investigate the graft and crime charges in the police department. "Big Bill" has lost his jovial disposition with the cares of his office. (International Newsreel.)

MID-WESTERN WOMEN SEEK OFFICES

Mrs. Cora Lewis, left, of Kinsley, Kas., well known newspaperwoman, may be the first woman in Kansas to hold a state office. She has been drafted by Democratic leaders to make the race for lieutenant governor. Mrs. Beatrice Craig, right, of Lincoln, Neb., is running against Senator George Norris for the Republican nomination for senator from that state. Dr. Jennie Callfas of Omaha also is seeking the Democratic senatorial nomination in Nebraska.

MOTHER PROUD OF POLAR SCOUT

Maternal pride irradiates from Mrs. Clyde L. Siple, of Erie, Pa., as she and her son, Scout Paul A. Siple, youngest member of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, see the sights in New York after his arrival. The youth received special commendation from Admiral Byrd for his work in the Antarctic.

BABY EARNS MORE THAN MOST MEN

Not many grown men make as much money as the little miss above, June Dwan Smith, who draws a weekly pay check for $10,000, for her "work" in a movie at Los Angeles.

AVIATION'S TRIBUTE TO BYRD

This medal, on which Julio Kilyoni, New York sculptor, is putting the finishing touches, will be presented to Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and the members of his expedition when they return to New York. One side of the medal depicts a tri-motored plane equipped with skis, in flight over the icy wastes of the polar regions, and the other side contains a likeness of Admiral Byrd with the words "Commemorating the conquest of the poles by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and his associates, presented by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, May 9, 1926-November 29, 1929."

Bask in Dame Fortune's Smile

Thomas N. De Lozier and his wife will soon sell their last bag of popcorn. They have just been notified that his grandmother, Abbie J. Carrollton, who died recently in Memphis, Tenn., willed them $1,500,000 of her $10,000,000 estate. The couple for years eked out a meagre living at their popcorn stand in Pueblo, Col. They will start on an extensive travel tour as soon as they receive their legacy.

Bobby Wins British Open

Before a gallery of 10,000 golf fans, Bobby Jones, young Atlantan, captured the British open golf championship at Hoylake, England, with a card of 291, two strokes better than Leo Diegal and MacDonald Smith, who were in a tie at 293.

Modest Balchen

Bernt Balchen, who piloted the plane in which Rear-Admiral Byrd flew over the South Pole, smiles to crowds in New York as thousands honor the polar adventurers on their return. Miss Thelma Parkinson, of Vine land, N. J., is the Democratic nominee for the unexpired Senate term of Walter E. Edge, ending March 4, 1931. Miss Parkinson is 81 years old.

Violation of Dry Laws to Support Her Children Brings Grief to Mother

MRS. EMILIO
MATOS

By RUBY WEIL
Central Press Staff Writer
NEW YORK, June 25—In New York, so people told Emilio Matos and his wife, Fernanda, they could make much money and could give their children fine things and a good education. So four years ago they left their home in Porto Rico for the metropolis and fortune.

The captain of the ship on which Emilio had been ship's carpenter for years brought them free with five of their six children. The oldest daughter was married and remained in Porto Rico.

Awakening
But in New York the Matoses found, like so many before them, that while education for one's children is truly easy to obtain, fine things are another matter. Even necessities were often out of reach, for Emilio's skill as a carpenter was of little avail since he could speak no English, even after four years.

Today, instead of sitting at ease in luxury and wealth, Mrs. Matos awaits a hearing on a charge that she violated the prohibition law, and hopes soon to hear from Emilio, who has been gone for three months.

"He was always a good husband and a good father," Mrs. Matos insisted in her five room tenement, where one of her many kindly neighbors acted as interpreter.

But three months ago, after seeking in vain for work, unable to make a living out of odd jobs, Emilio went away. Later he sent $40 from the ship on which he had found work. For two months there has been no word.

"Perhaps he is in Porto Rico, or on a ship far away," Mrs. Matos said. "He is a good man."

After Emilio went away it was even harder. The family of children had grown to seven, with the birth of twin girls a year ago, and will be increased again in a few months. Only Rene, who is eighteen, was old enough to work, and he could not earn much when he could find odd jobs.

Mrs. Matos had to stay at home with the children. The grocer was kind and let her run up bills, and the neighbors helped when they could. But often the children were hungry.

The Mirage
Then two months ago a friend moved away. He told Mrs. Matos she could have the still he had in his apartment and showed her how to make whiskey. So she set up the still in her $30 tenement.

Didn't she know it was wrong to make whiskey?

"Oh, yes," she knew. "But when your children are hungry"—she shrugged her tired shoulders. She was not defiant of the law—only tired, worn out and old at 35 with child-bearing and struggling.

She didn't make much, selling her whiskey; she was afraid to sell to strangers. But sometimes it brought in $12 or $15 a week. That was not enough to pay the rent and feed eight mouths, even supplemented by Rene's earnings; but it helped.

Arrested
Then the other day an inspector for the Tenement House Department came. Perhaps he saw the still; Mrs. Matos had made no attempt to conceal it. And the next day a policeman came and arrested Mrs. Matos.

They let her out on bail, for

AMERICAN ENGLISH BEST

Dictionary Maker From Overseas Finds Yankees Speak Precisely

By RUBY WEIL,
By Central Press.

NEW YORK, June 25—Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly had to come to America to learn to speak English and so thoroughly did this Englishman learn English in America that now he writes our dictionaries. He started some forty years ago, when he left England with the intention of becoming a mechanical engineer, abandoning the publishing business in which his family, originally Italian, had been engaged for generations.

But in New York he learned of a position open at a publishing firm. Ever since he has helped produce editions of a standard dictionary, of which he now is managing editor, as well as editor of a magazine's column on lexicography.

"The speech of the educated American is more accurate than that of the educated Englishman," avers the 66-year-old lexicographer. "The Englishman slurs his vowels and mounds his consonants. Tottenham Court Road becomes Tot'n'm Caught Road. There are many faults in American speech, but at least it can be understood."

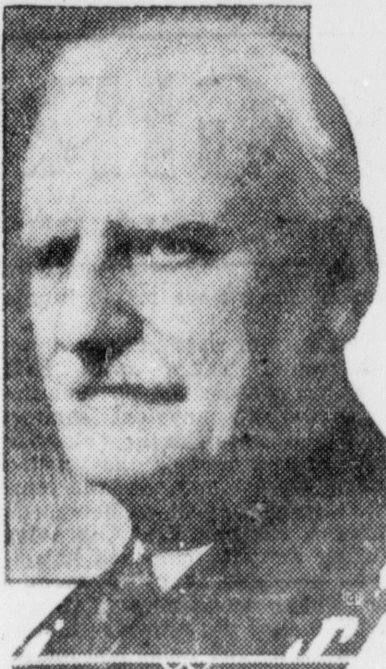

Sturdier Speech Here.
"American speech is more virile than British. This is a nation bubbling over with inventive genius; for each new series of inventions new words must be added to the vocabulary. To mention only two, radio and aeronautics have added thousands of words."

"On the other hand, many words which are considered new are really very old. 'Whoopie' can be traced back to the Tudor period, when it was a call to horses or bounds in any kind of struggle."

Dr. Vizetelly takes a human rather than a pedantic attitude toward words.

"How many words are there in the English language?" He repeated the oft-asked question. "I don't know; I haven't seen the morning newspapers."

Newspapers Set the Pace.
"If a word recurs again and again in the newspapers, people have a right to know about it."

Dr. FRANK H. VIZETELLY

whether scholars have accepted it or not."

The 66-year-old lexicographer takes frequent airplane rides, whenever opportunity offers, as a matter of duty. He wants to learn everything possible concerning the science of aeronautics, to pass on authentic information in his dictionaries. The same interpretation of his duty once prompted a trip in a diver's suit ten or twenty fathoms into the waters covering a wrecked ship outside Bermuda.

And he answers questions, many and varied.

Some of the Questions Asked
"What was the name of the play Shaw wrote about Joan of Arc?" "What is the plural of sanatorium—sanatoria or sanatoriums?"

Dr. Vizetelly gives the answer patiently—unless it is a request for one of his valuable lists—of recent additions to the vocabulary, for instance. Such requests may come from competitive sources; bootlegging and hijacking of words are not unknown, though not nearly so frequently as in the days before dictionaries were copyrighted.

Cross-word puzzle workers are helped by the score.

Lists Errors, Too.

To assist in answering questions Dr. Vizetelly has compiled a "Dictionary of Errors"—some 50 volumes or more. To these his assistants can refer.

This leaves Dr. Vizetelly free for his own numerous activities among which are included compiling new editions of the dictionary and revising old ones, watching the newspapers for new words and usages, keeping abreast of politics and other current subjects as part of his job of learning everything possible pertaining to the business of words.

RESULT OF TRAFFIC SURVEY TO BE GIVEN CITY COMMISSION

An analysis of traffic conditions and the parking problem in Xenia, based on a survey made by police at the request of the Greene County Auto Club last Saturday night, will be presented to City Commission at its meeting Thursday night.

For one hour Saturday night police checked the license number of every motor vehicle parked in the business section of the city in the area bounded by Third, Galloway, Church and Collier Sts.

This information was turned over to the auto club which is seeking to ascertain the total number of machines parked and of this number, what percentage of autos was owned by Xenians, how many belonged to farmers of those living in the rural districts and the exact number owned by motorists from other parts of Ohio or outside the state.

This data is being gathered, it is believed, in order to aid City Commission in formulating a policy for the solution of traffic problems of the city.

A large number of motorists are also expected to attend the commission meeting to present their views on the present rigid enforcement of the city's traffic code, which prohibits, among other

CHILDREN PRESENT PROGRAM AT CHURCH

A program consisting of songs, poems and Bible memory work learned in school during the last year, was given by children of the first three grades of the Greene County Children's Home at the Presbyterian Church in Cedarville, Sunday morning.

The program was under the director at the Home. Mrs. Cavender had presented the same program before a large audience at the Home on Flower Mission Day at the request of Mrs. J. F. Van Eaton, member of the Home board. The Rev. W. P. Harriman of Cedarville requested the program be repeated with the Children's Day exercises at the church in Cedarville.

Following the program the children, teacher and Supt. and Mrs. J. R. Soward were cordially received at various home of members of the congregation where bountiful dinners were served.

SMOOTHING YOUR PATH ALONG EVERY HIGHWAY

Specially designed springs and four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers contribute to the riding comfort of the new Ford

THE NEW FORD PHAETON

ONE of the fine things about driving the new Ford is the way it takes you over the miles without strain or fatigue.

Mentally you are at ease because you are sure of the mechanical performance of the car. No matter how long the trip, or rough or devious the roadway, you know it will bring you safely, quickly to the journey's end.

Through thickest traffic, up steepest hills, along the open road, you will drive with security and confidence because the new Ford is so alert and capable and so easy to operate and control.

The steering wheel responds readily to a light touch. Gears shift smoothly and silently. Brakes take hold quickly and firmly even on rain-swept streets. Unusual acceleration, speed and power are especially appreciated in emergencies. A space but little longer than the car itself is all you need for parking.

These features simplify the mechanics of driving and, together with reliability, add a great deal to the mental comfort of motoring.

Physically, too, you will feel fresh and relaxed in the new Ford because it is such a roomy, easy-riding car.

Opera Director Weds Ballet Dancer

Winfield came almost every day, but Clara Dee persisted in refusing to see him. She could not believe that any person would be so interested in her. It was his generous nature which pitted her plight, his uncle's interest in her; she would never have seen him again had it not been for her arrest, she was sure. She received flowers in profusion from him—which she distributed among the other prisoners—books, magazines, fruit, candy. To all these she gave small consideration; they only served to break the monotony of the terror-filled days and to make her tiny box of a cell less dreary.

No sooner did Mrs. Flynn learn that she was indeed a locked prisoner than she appeared at the jail, fortified with a huge hamper and the fire of indignation in her eye. When the cell door had clanged to behind her—if scornful looks could melt iron, it would have collapsed then and there—Clara Dee flew into her generous embrace and kissed her rough, flushed cheek. Whereupon, she again wept real tears.

"Thar, thar," continued her benefactor, "they can't fool Mother Flynn, that they can't. Ye never did it ef ye set ye didn't. But child, was ye not out yer head with fear?"

For a moment Dee looked at her as if the very earth were about to give way beneath her. "Now, Mother Flynn, don't you start that! I told the truth."

"To be sure ye did, but I sez—I would ef blame ef ye none ef ye did him. I'd like to've helped, meself. But, see here, what I've brought ye, me dear," and she opened the hamper to disclose such delicacies as only Mrs. Flynn's can.

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

READ THIS FIRST:

Clara Dee Forester is a millionaire's daughter who is willing to be one dollar. She goes to Mrs. Flynn's boarding house to live, and there meets Winfield Baxter, a young chemist, who falls in love with her. Estelle Kay persuades her to model for the famous artist, Ivan Moreau, who also pays her marked attention. Estelle is jealous and threatens her. Ivan traps her in the studio, and in defending herself she threatens to shoot him, just as she falls down stairs and hears a shot and a scream. Winfield disappears, they hunt for the murderer of Ivan Moreau.

The papers announce a valuable scientific discovery of Winfield's. Clara Dee is heartbroken at his desertion of her.

Clara Dee is arrested, jailed and indicted for first degree murder. They prepare for her trial. Clara Dee, somehow, endures the long day of testimony and grueling questions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIV

She had grown very pale, and the gray eyes were a startling contrast in their very apparent hollows. But she managed to keep herself meticulously neat and clean, even with the poor toilet equipment at her disposal. The jailer's wife even capitulated to her charms, and secretly favored her with an occasional dainty. It was she who overruled the first objections to Clara Dee's using the typewriter, and brought her one from the office.

"Well, what do you think of the case?" Gregory inquired, after Donley had consulted alone with Clara Dee.

"Certain she did it, poor girl. Very simple case. Same old story. Any good girl would have done the same thing. Besides, who else could have done it? She admits that she was there alone with him, that she threatened him with the gun, everything but the final act—and there was no one else who could have done it. However, her persistence in contention that she is innocent may do more for her than if she would plead guilty. Case of mental obsession. She looks innocent enough to influence the jury with our help. I'll tell a pathetic story of how she preserved her honor which will be true enough, for all that, how she got out the revolver, intending to frighten him, so that he would leave her alone, and fired it accidentally. We shan't have to coach her to plead not guilty, for she has a fixed idea in her mind that she is not."

"Would that I had never let her father make that fool will! I wonder what he would think of his plans, could he see his daughter now? As I told him at the time, 'A poor protection I'd call it, Matt.' He groaned and drew a hand across his face.

"But with a fortune, she might sooner or later have hanged herself, anyway. Don't take it so hard, Gregory. I think there's a chance."

"Free her, Donley, and I'll pay you anything! The girl's got the right stuff in her, but things broke bad for her. You've got to free her."

Winfield came almost every day, but Clara Dee persisted in refusing to see him. She could not believe that any person would be so interested in her. It was his generous nature which pitted her plight, his uncle's interest in her; she would never have seen him again had it not been for her arrest, she was sure. She received flowers in profusion from him—which she distributed among the other prisoners—books, magazines, fruit, candy. To all these she gave small consideration; they only served to break the monotony of the terror-filled days and to make her tiny box of a cell less dreary.

No sooner did Mrs. Flynn learn that she was indeed a locked prisoner than she appeared at the jail, fortified with a huge hamper and the fire of indignation in her eye. When the cell door had clanged to behind her—if scornful looks could melt iron, it would have collapsed then and there—Clara Dee flew into her generous embrace and kissed her rough, flushed cheek. Whereupon, she again wept real tears.

"Thar, thar," continued her benefactor, "they can't fool Mother Flynn, that they can't. Ye never did it ef ye set ye didn't. But child, was ye not out yer head with fear?"

For a moment Dee looked at her as if the very earth were about to give way beneath her. "Now, Mother Flynn, don't you start that! I told the truth."

"To be sure ye did, but I sez—I would ef blame ef ye none ef ye did him. I'd like to've helped, meself. But, see here, what I've brought ye, me dear," and she opened the hamper to disclose such delicacies as only Mrs. Flynn's can.

concoct from mere staple ingredients.

The days of waiting grew almost unbearable. There were hours when no consolation, no illuminating hope, no physical comforts could obliterate the anguish which sneered and scathed the prisoner. There were hours in the night when she sprang up on her uncomfortable cot and beat the thick, stifling air with clenched hands—going over and over that night at the studio, wondering if it were possible—no! no!—she had not killed Ivan—she must not let herself believe that, just because all the others did. But Mr. Donley—he didn't believe it, and for that one staunch supporter she was grateful. And Mrs. Flynn—dear old soul! Life would be quite unbearable, were it not for a few such loyal souls.

From Winfield, there was a note every day, begging her to permit him to see her, solicitous for her comfort. But he believed her guilty! No, she would not see him. Perhaps she had been guilty, his loyalty would have been comforted. But his pity was unbearable!

Reporters besieged her. Women reporters came—hoping that they might obtain some statement from this girl, as woman to woman, which the men could not—and left with a genuine weight of pity dragging at their hearts.

Men reporters came—hoping that they might obtain some statement from this girl which woman could not, she was undoubtedly a man's woman, to be so involved in this case—and left with a mixture of awe and chagrin on their faces, unconsciously carrying their hats until the January air outside reminded them of their bared heads.

But with the meager information they had obtained, they filled columns with sob stories, bona fide information and all else that the curious public sought. They elaborated on the descriptions of gifts and tributes which filled her cell, wrote in detail of what she wore, the cosmetics on the crude table, what she read, et cetera, ad infinitum.

One day, she was surprised to receive a note from Dee. She was, oh, so sorry for her. She was, she thought she could do. Had she really killed the artist? At least, she was getting some excitement that the rest of them were not, they might as well be dead for all there was to interest them, she would love to come to see Dee, but mother would be so horrified that, for once, she dared not act upon her impulse. She hoped that Dee would be freed and she loved her forever.

More selfish love, thought Dee. Of the kind that would take but not give, when giving was difficult. At times, she became worldly sympathetic to others, extremely hopeful. Especially after one of Donley's frequent calls.

Gregory came often. Whether or not he still believed her guilty, she was grateful for his assurance that everything was being done for her benefit, his fatherly concern.

"But I can't afford even one lawyer, much less two," she objected one day. "Won't this cost a very great deal?"

"Don't mention it, my dear. The least I can do is to get you out of this mess, after letting your Dad make that darn will. It's as much my fault as his."

"Don't think that, Mr. Gregory. No one is to blame. It just happened, I guess. I sound like a fatalist, but I'm beginning to feel like one, too. I'll let you pay my expenses now, because unless I win, I'd not be much good to anyone, anyway. But if I do win out, I shall pay you back every penny that it costs you."

He met often with Donley, preparing her defense, arguing every point to his entire satisfaction. No stone must be left unturned.

"But her denial won't let you plead mental obsession!" he objected.

"Ah, Gregory, that is the point! She didn't, did it? Third degree didn't move her, did it? No! Nor will a team of elephants. What is that but mental obsession?"

"I see. Then you will admit that she is guilty, and let her contradiction prove her justification?"

"Exactly!"

Came the day of the trial. Clara Dee prepared for court with all the courage she could command. If she were going to maintain her innocence, she must not look like a condemned culprit. She donned a plain crepe frock with lace collar and cuffs, conscious that all the papers would carry blatant accounts of what she wore, every movement she made, every word she uttered; pictures of her entering the court with the bailiff, consulting with Donley on one side and standing before the judge on the other. But she thought she had already ready suffered the depths of every known humiliation. If she wanted to live, she must help them to free her.

And did she want to live? Oh, yes! Since that first day of this disgrace, when death had seemed to her a blessed relief, she had had time for analyzing her life. And it was still precious, she had decided. There must be some way to live down even such disgrace as this, when one was innocent, one's conscience free. Her father must have faced many difficult situations, she knew. Of course, not like this! But everyone who battled the world for progress and success experienced injustice and difficult situations. She had learned that much. She would carry on—as he had—bravely, doggedly, demanding justice.

So, instead of the cowering, sniffling creature that the court awaited, walked a pale, beautiful girl, with her head high, neither flinching before the cameras' eyes nor those of the morbid, curious spectators.

She wondered if Win were there, but later concluded that he was not. She did not see him. And, somehow, she felt that he would not be there. As she had refused to see him previously, he would not thrust his presence upon her, and especially at such a time. She was grateful for his fine consideration, and she was aware of a warm, comfortable pride in him, which helped her through the long, tedious day.

DAYTON FIRM GETS ELECTION PRINTING

Contract for printing poll books, tally sheets and other precinct elections supplies for both the August primary and the regular November election in Greene County was awarded by the Greene County Board of Elections Monday to the Johnson-Watson Co., of Dayton on its bid of approximately $600.

The election board postponed the acceptance of bids for the printing of about 9,000 ballots for the August primary because the secretary of state has not yet certified the official ballot to the local board and printing firms did not desire to submit cost estimates without first examining a sample of the ballot to be used.

Sound has helped the animated cartoon type of moving picture more than any other kind in the opinion of Paul Terry, pioneer animated cartoon artist.

Terry was the first to use animals as characters throughout a moving picture cartoon. "In the early days of animated cartoons he mere fact that a drawing moved, satisfied us. Then came emphasis on the quality of the story, next came 'gags' and the following development was the peeing up of the pictures."

Every exposure in an animated cartoon must be drawn by hand. Then they are run together under the moving camera eye.

"We used to think 1,200 drawings was a lot of work," says Terry. "But now 5,000 drawings are used in a picture and since cartoons became audible, the new method evolved is highly complicated.

"Our idea is to have the music so closely interwoven with the cartoons that one tells the story as well as the other," says Scheib.

Terry was born in San Mateo, Calif. He was formerly a newspaper cartoonist in Portland, Ore., San Francisco and New York. Fifteen years ago he started making animated cartoons. He originated the "Aesop's Fables" series, made the "Farmer Alfalfa" animated cartoons and produced the first "Krazy Kat" series.

After a tour of Holland, France and Spain, Ronald Colman is coming back to Hollywood to make a new picture. Frederick Lonsdale, the British playwright, has written a story and will direct the piece.

Terry makes rough drawings to outline the story. The scenario, along with a chart showing the running time of each gag, then goes to Philip A. Scheib, orchestra conductor, who writes the musical score, makes individual orchestral arrangements and the various sound effects to be made in conjunction with the music.

With the use of a stop watch a chart is made showing the exact time in which the characters are moving, when the pause comes in a dance step and how long a vocal note is held by a character—all to the fraction of a second.

The orchestra records the music on one strip of film while the drawings are photographed on another strip. To a third strip of film a sound track, the sound is transferred first and then the photography is transferred, completing the sound-on-film process.

Terry favors the use of a dog, cat and mouse in his cartoons, as the public is more familiar with these domestic animals than any others.

He points out that a commercial advantage of producing animated cartoons is that they are mostly sound, music and movement, so that they do not have to be changed for foreign markets in the case of ordinary talking pictures.

"GOOD MORNING, JUDGE!"

That's Greeting In Family Where Husband And Wife On Bench

Judge HENRY F. ATKINSON and Judge EDITH M. ATKINSON

MIAMI, Fla., June 25.—It's "Good morning, judge" in the Atkinson family every morning, and it's "Good morning, judge" without the fears and trembling usually associated with the phrase. And it's Judge Atkinson and Judge Atkinson when the sign their names on the hotel register. For, you see, husband and wife are both judges in the local courts.

The husband, Henry F. Atkinson, is judge of the circuit court, and the wife, Edith M. Atkinson, is judge of the juvenile court. Both, incidentally, were elected by overwhelming votes at the same primary. Judge Edith was Florida's first woman judge, and is believed to be the first south of the Mason and Dixon line.

During the five years Judge Edith has presided on the bench of the local juvenile court 6,000 children's cases have been handled by her court. And, strange to say, most of the cases were boys. And, of that throng of juvenile delinquents and unfortunates, only a very small percentage have been sent away to county and state institutions.

Religion at Home
"The home," says Judge Edith, "is the one institution we should try to hold together firmly. It is in the home that children should learn something of religion. I have found that a large percentage of the children who are in court have no religious training, and that they lack respect for the law. The religious influence is invaluable in a child's life."

ASA KEYES FAVORS SHORTER TERMS FOR CONVICTS HE SAYS

By HAROLD HEROUX
International News Service Special Correspondent

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Cal., June 25.—Asa Keyes, Los Angeles County's former district attorney who is serving a one to fourteen year sentence in San Quentin prison for bribery conspiracy, now is a crusader for shorter penitentiary terms, he revealed in an exclusive interview.

"Imprisonment," Keyes said, "has a saturation point. From my observation during the three months I have been here I am convinced that after a certain period no more lessons can be learned and inmates deteriorate in mind, body and spirit."

"Eighty-five per cent of the men in San Quentin are under sentences which are too severe. They are being harmed instead of helped. Six months is long enough for these men to learn their lessons and pay their debts to society. After that they go to pieces rapidly."

"Statistics show that 56 per cent of paroled men become 'wood cutters' again. I believe this percentage could be materially increased by shorter sentences."

"I believe with Warden E. Lawes, of Sing Sing prison, that four of every ten men in state prisons today should be released; that three of the ten should serve two year sentences and the other three in-carcerated for life; no in-between sentences, either short or for life."

Keyes, who entered prison March 12, must wait nine months more before the prison board will fix his indeterminate sentence.

The former chunky prosecutor has not regained many of the pounds he lost during his year in the Los Angeles county jail, but he has acquired a natty pattern of tan.

"Well, tan, eh?" he inquired. "I sit out in the sun every minute I can. Feel fine, too."

But the brown hair with which he left office has turned to gray. There is enough of it now to comb, grown in after his prison clipper cut, but it is a nearly-white thatch. Keyes is interested in the gubernatorial race. "How's it coming?" he asked.

He predicted that his successor in office and prosecutor, Burton Pitts, would finish third and last.

His face and eyes clouded with emotion when he mentioned his family.

"My wife and two daughters three weeks ago visited me here in prison for the first time," he said. "They came up on an excursion. Surely wish I could see them more often. But we can't afford the trip. My girls are working in Los Angeles to support their mother until I come home."

Education is another great need of the child of today, Judge Atkinson finds. Education, not of the book type, but education of how to work with others. "We would have fewer cases of juvenile delinquency if the children had proper home and religious training, with plenty of good old-fashioned parental control."

Judge Atkinson is especially fitted to hear delinquent girls' cases, as many delicate questions have to be asked by the judge.

A believer in educational and preventive social work is a potent factor in keeping children occupied and happy, Judge Edith says.

"Playgrounds, community centers, all the splendidly organized social work of the present day contributes to the upbuilding of family life and is the means of interesting children in healthy recreation."

"Young people who have been brought up in a healthy atmosphere very rarely get into the kind of trouble that is aired in the juvenile court. Usually children misbehave because they literally have nothing else to do."

This youthful and attractive judge has been a member of the American Bar Association since 1922, a vice president of the association in Florida, and is serving her fifth year as secretary of the Dade County Bar Association. She is immediate past international president of the Phi Delta Delta legal fraternity, having succeeded Mabel Walker Willebrandt to that post.

She is an ardent sportswoman, takes an active interest in Girl Scout activities, has never had to campaign for re-election. She and her husband, who is ranking member of the Florida Bar, are the only married couple in the world who occupy the judicial bench, it is believed here.

E BRAND White Naphtha SOAP

The Difference Between Them Is Merely A Cake Of Soap

How often a bright day is darkened for the small boy who comes in after a glorious game only to meet sharp reproof because of soiled clothing.

Don't make your child's life miserable with constant care for his clothes during happy vacation days! Let him romp with a light heart when washing his play soiled garments is such a simple and easy matter if you always use the almost magical, dirt banishing

"E" BRAND WHITE NAPHTHA SOAP

It is made of ingredients so pure that it is absolutely "clean enough to eat." Because it contains a high percentage of coconut and vegetable oils, (the finest cleansing agents known) combined with a harmless bleach, "E" BRAND WHITE NAPHTHA SOAP, not only removes every atom of dirt but makes clothes dazzling white and daintily fragrant. It will not damage the most delicate fabrics or colors and never hardens or irritates the hands but long immersion in the suds will leave them soft and smooth instead.

"E" Brand Soap Chips

For dish washing and for use in the washing machine. It is simply the wonderful "E" White Naphtha Soap in this convenient, easy to use form.
